

News

27.07.2010

Actant Upgrades To NYSE Technologies' SuperFeed Data Platform

By Justin Grant

NYSE Technologies announced today that software-trading firm Actant will begin using its SuperFeed data platform as it looks to gain access to overseas markets.

NYSE Technologies, the commercial technology arm of NYSE Euronext, describes the SuperFeed platform as an industrial-strength data ticker plant and distribution system with microsecond latency. Actant said that by using SuperFeed, it will reduce time-to-market, improve performance, and increase market efficiency while lowering operational expenses.

“We are confident that NYSE Technologies’ powerful ultra low-latency SuperFeed engine will provide those optimal performance levels for them to perform efficiently and remain competitive in these markets,” Actant Chief Executive Peter Grant said in a statement.